

PRESS INFORMATION

HART ENERGY PRESS PASS POLICY

Complimentary press passes are available to professional members of the media who are “working press” on assignment covering the event or the companies presenting. To qualify for press credentials, you must be employed by or freelance for the editorial side of a business, financial, or general news print or online publication – or produce news segments for a broadcast network. Your role or title at the print or online publication or broadcast network cannot be in a sales, promotional, or executive capacity. If you are a freelancer, we will require the name and contact information for the editor who has given you the assignment to verify. Journalists working “on spec” are not eligible for press credentials.

Q&A

- What access does the press pass give me?
You have all the privileges as a paid conference attendee
- I am bringing a photographer with me. Do they need a press pass, too?
Yes, anyone attending the conference needs a badge for entry
- Where do press members sit inside the main session room?
Press members have reserved seating (with tables and electrical hook-ups) in the back of the conference room
- Will there be a Q&A with the speakers?
After their presentations, most speakers (keynote or spotlight) will take questions from attendees and press regarding their presentation/company/the industry, etc.
- Is there a press room?
It depends on the conference, so please ask when you check in at registration
- What if I need an accompanying photo for my story?
Please email press@hartenergy.com as soon as you know what image you need so it can be requested from the event photographer
- Can I get a copy of the speakers’ presentations?
Some speakers’ presentations will be available after the conference has adjourned. Registered conference and press attendees will receive an email (usually within 24-72 hours) with a conference-specific username and password to access these materials
